By Jerry E. Espenada

INSTANTLY THE 4/4 BEAT, THE national anthem should be played or sung in the 2/4, according to the Department of Education.

"It's time to rectify the error," said Jonathan Malaya, education assistant secretary for special projects. He is also chair of the agency task force on the 118th Independence Day observances.

Malaya said that "for decades, even, if not all the public and private elementary and secondary schools nationwide" have been singing "Lupang Hinirang" in the 4/4, or quadruple time.

Republic Act No. 8481, or the Flag and Heraldic Code of 1990, specifies that the "Lupang Hinirang" shall be in accordance with the musical arrangement and composition of the late Julian Felipe." Malaya told the Inquirer,

House defers vote on CARP law extension amid protests

By TJ Burgeio and Jerome Añing

OUTRAGED FARMERS JUMPED FROM the gallery and yelled at lawmakers on Tuesday night in protest of the move to extend for five years a certain bill to delay a key component of the Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program (CARP).

The lawmakers agreed to forgo the vote and instead adjourn Session No. 21, a joint resolution with the Senate maintaining the land acquisition and distribution (LAD) component of the CARP until Dec. 31. The 20-year-old agrarian reform law, issued as the centerpiece of a program to free farmers from the bondage of the soil, expired on June 10.

The House adjourned yesterday without approving the bill extending the LAD for five years from June 10 to cover the acquisition and distribution of at least 1.1 million hectares.

Minutes before the resolution was adopted at 9 p.m., Tuesday, farmers fighting for agrarian reform started a demonstration in the gallery hall.

Tausug leaders talk to Ces kidnappers

Another group takes captives

By Julie S. Nipala, Inquirer Mindanao

ZAMBOANGA CITY—A TEAM OF TAUSUG LEADERS IS negotiating with Moro bandits for the release of broadcast journalist Ces Drilon of ABS-CBN and her two cameramen who were abducted along with their guide in Maimbung, Sulu, on Sunday.

Senior Supt. Sebastian Rasin, police chief of Sulu, confirmed to the Inquirer that a negotiating team composed of "well-known persons—leaders and influential" had been formed. But he refused to name its members.

"These are leaders of Sulu. They can talk and negotiate with the kidnappers and they get positive feedback on our good report regarding the abduction of the captives," Rasin said.

He said the team had been given seven days to make contact with the kidnappers: "In a week's time, report may good news also."

The captives have been transferred to another armed group in Maimbung in Jolo town, according to Rasin.

"We were informed that 'Gai' group was brought to Zamboanga at around 10:00 p.m.," he said.

Int'l media groups air concern over Sulu abductions

LOCAL AND FOREIGN MEDIA ORGANIZATIONS have voiced concern over the continuing dangers endured by Filipino journalists and called on the government to work for the safe release of Ces Drilon and those of her companions.

"We are deeply concerned for the safety of these three journalists. It is great cause for concern that this volatile southern region of the Philippines remains insecure for the press, and we call on local authorities to work diligently to secure their safe and swift release," Rob Dietz, Asia program coordinator of the New York-based Committee to Protect Journalists (CPJ), said in a statement.

Multisectoral bid to raise test scores to 75 by 2012

By Tina Arce-Dumalo

PUBLIC ELEMENTARY SCHOOLS students in the Philippines have long been failing to pass the National Achievement Test (NAT), with the average score in 2006 placed at only 57.

Fortunately for the students in six cities and one province, parents, community, local and national officials and civic groups have combined to help them raise their average test scores in English, science and math to at least 75 by 2012.

The guiding framework is Benchmarking in Nueva Vizcaya, San Isidro in Nueva Ecija, Iligan City and Bulacan City, and the provinces of Cebu and Pangasinana is 57-75, an ambitious private sector initiative in

Daboy's wish: Box-office hit in final show

By Maribel R. Cruz

TILL THE END, ACTION STAR Rody "Daboy" Fernandez was a box-office hit.

Hundreds of thousands—family, friends and fans—turned up for the final public viewing on Tuesday night at his wife, transforming Heritage Memorial Park and Crematorium in Taguig City to a giant theater, albeit one that was very brightly lit and filled with fragrant white flowers.

Roll bandwagons made played rump in the background, and with each throw open to make a single chapel area out of the standard 30, the place was still bustling at the scene.

Heritage marketing manager Rodel Mendez said that was Rody's wish—to have the entire place for the gathering of people who loved and supported him.

The main viewing room consisted of four standard service areas. Four others served as family rooms, and the main-rolling two was the dining area, where a buffet had been laid out since Saturday night, served by volunteer eaters.

The actor, who had just participated in a concert for two years, died at 6:15 a.m. on Saturday. He was 56.

Bring back gardening to our elementary schools

NORMALLY WE CAN SAFELY SAY THAT CAR design is being emphasized in our elementary schools. There is no cooperation between the school, garden of the past and those that we have now. If "school and home gardening" are included in today's elementary curriculum?

In many elementary schools, the garden sites outside the building are planted with grasses and trees. What is more important to the education of our kids—planting gardens or raising vegetables? It's high time that the importance of education outside school themselves this question, especially now that we are facing a food crisis.

Being an elementary child, not only do we have individual school gardens, we were required to make home gardens. Our parents would risk our home to find out if we had a garden.

According to Mark B. Rosenthal ("School and Home Gardening," Diabetes, Science & Public Interest, 1981), the concept of school gardening may be summarized as follows:

(1) to teach the people the correct methods of producing important vegetables that will successfully grow in our country through proper seed selection and accurate cultivation; (2) to teach the people to produce more abundance and a greater variety of vegetables; (3) to teach the fundamental principles of plant life through a complete and practical demonstration at the school garden; (4) to teach the school children to make gardens such as may be included in every home.

home; (5) to make these gardens self-sufficient and (7) to teach them the management and agriculture jobs necessary to do.

According to Gail M. Paulson, children learn easily and what they learn as children they can carry better over to their adult years. He stressed that the school is the most effective agency for introducing new farm practices. When children accept the results of their teacher without question, scientific gardening projects permeate the scientific nature. Well-sustained studies and attention to scientific farming could be the most important solution against hunger. Most of our children can finish only the elementary grades, it is necessary that we should expose them to the early years with enough skills and experience in vegetable gardening. These will serve as their working means to learning in which they may engage after school.

I hope that our DepEd high officials will realize the importance of school and home gardening and put more emphasis, even more, on a school and home gardening program.

Bicol region braces for more pupils

By Patricia Aguilera
and Lynette T. Ganti
Laguna City

IT SEEMED THINGS were normal in Bicol schools when classes resumed on Tuesday.

But behind the scenes, education officials were ensuring the students into additional classrooms.

Although yet to consolidate data from school divisions across the region, the Bicol Department of Education is expecting more students and resources next school year.

"More families have been transferring their children to public schools because they can no longer shoulder tuition in private schools," Gloria Olanio, senior education program specialist of the DepEd IV, said.

Students who dropped out last year while schools and buses straggled by Typhoon "Mitag" and "Biring" now being rehabilitated may opt to return to the learning facilities already rehabilitated this year.

Based on the average growth rate of enrollees for the past two years, the DepEd IV expects 950,626 elementary students and 344,294 secondary students across the region this school year.

For elementary level alone, the agency is looking at a shortage of 8,477 classrooms and 276 teachers.

DepEd IV records show that 20,123 elementary classrooms across Bicol were able to accommodate last year's total enrollees of 915,331 pupils.

A TEACHER at the Tapanan Elementary School in Laguna City uses chalk to help the pupils' activities during the first day of classes on Tuesday.

Regional physical facilities coordinator Ylano Regalado claimed that Bicol was short of only 4,000 classrooms.

The issue, however, only applied to the replacement and repair of classrooms destroyed by super typhoons in 2006 and does not take into account the additional needs of increasing enrollees.

He reported that school construction under the Bicol Calamity Assistance and Rehabilitation Efforts (BICARE) was already 99.7 percent completed.

The same ambience of normalcy existed at the Tapanan Elementary School at the hilly village in Laguna City as around 200 schoolchildren showed up on the first day of school despite the scorching heat inside their makeshift classrooms.

The temporary classrooms, built in the aftermath of the super typhoons, were made with galvanized iron, sealed with strong wood and covered with dry mud.

A piece of aerial pipe served as the school hall.

If not for the doors latched with grade books, a Philippine flag raised on a bamboo pole, and schoolchildren loudly reading in their own voices, one would hardly recognize it as a school.

The children have been waiting to be transferred to a permanent schoolhouse for a little more than a year now. Last this month, they are finally slated to be relocated in a six-room school building donated by a local mall.

But a teacher, who refused to be quoted for lack of authority to speak to the media, said the long inconvenience have allowed the learning of the pupils.

"In years we have during the day. And since only plywood divides the rooms, noise from one class disturbs other classes," the teacher said.

The teacher also said that since the classrooms were new construction houses, the pupils get easily distracted by passersby.

There were also insufficient instructional materials, she added.

"When the teachers here do is implement learning material, make class sets, and come up with more class activities to maintain the interest of the pupils," she said.

The admitted learners, that the makeshift classrooms were far better than temporary tents.

She added that their school's enrollment have increased due to the students who being awarded to beneficiaries and family being populated with a solid community.

If not for the latch at the doors and schoolchildren loudly reading in their own voices, one would hardly recognize this structure as a school.

"It was not actually a formal class, we just introduced the public-transfer lessons," Tagliba said to the Inquirer. "We're just giving what Master Teachers believe and many from our children."

Belmonte further ordered the school's closure to make way for the construction of a new sports complex. IES students were then advised to transfer to the nearby P.V. Balentine Elementary School (PVBES).

Doc's counter-affidavit says liposuction okay for removal of 'benign tumor'

By Di Yap

IT WASN'T A CYST BUT a benign tumor called "lipoma."

In a counter-affidavit which he filed yesterday in the Manila Personalities' Office, neurotic doctor Manuel Calayan said his Filipino-American patient got it wrong when he accused the surgeon of negligence in removing a soft mass in his stomach through liposuction instead of surgery.

Unlike a cyst, a lipoma is "soft to touch and usually asymptomatic and generally painless. And because of the fact that it is benign, a lipoma may be removed by means of liposuction," the doctor said.

Calayan was responding to a complaint lodged by Lumen Marasigan, also known as Lumen Bembich, who blamed the surgeon for the growth of a "cyst" in his stomach after a liposuction.

Marasigan in the same petition also accused Calayan of botching a grade misdiagnosis procedure that he claimed led to the disfigurement of his penis. Calayan had denied any liability in his counter-affidavit, the doctor said.

On the other hand, a cyst is defined as "a bladder, and abnormal sac containing gas, fluid, or a contained material, with a membranous lining," Calayan added.

He said the difference between the two terms should be ignored because lipoma, "a benign tumor composed of fatty tissue," may be removed through liposuction because of its softness.

On the other hand, a cyst is defined as "a bladder, and abnormal sac containing gas, fluid, or a contained material, with a membranous lining," Calayan added.

He cited medical references, such as the 2000 Guidelines for Liposuction Surgery appearing in the American Journal of Cosmetic Surgery which indicate liposuction as one method to remove a lipoma.

Accordingly, the removal of a lipoma through liposuction is through the use of liposuction techniques is an accepted and safe medical procedure which other cosmetic surgeons would also employ when faced with the same situation," Calayan said in the affidavit he filed through lawyer Baggio Glad.

In his complaint, Marasigan said he underwent liposuction to remove the mass in part of a "package deal." Calayan offered him with the penis enhancement operation, but the procedure allegedly did not work, and the "cyst" grew bigger.

Mickelson feels right at home this time

GUY DEGIO—THERE IS ONE US OPEN where Phil Mickelson should feel right at home.

It's going up in San Diego and played high school matches at Torrey Pines. The place hangs from the concrete in the San Diego airport, along with the city's other famous sites.

This major has been anything but friendly to him.

A 34-time winner on the US PGA Tour, Mickelson is 17-17 in 17 attempts at the national championship, and he's had with him losses by more than double his first-place score at the Open.

It's becoming Mickelson's nemesis as much as the Masters was Greg Norman's legend.

"Well, I love it," Mickelson said. "I just haven't gotten the job done."

It's given plenty of life from this iconic, canyon-filled course and its languid golfers, reminding his teammates cheating sections by warning the track limitations here there times. But not more after the course was revamped in 2001 by the US Open.

"I haven't putted the greens to well over the mounds," said Mickelson, who has spent countless hours on the golf course with that game much over the years.

"I don't know if a few years ago when I won the Open was going to be here," Mickelson acknowledged. "But I've been playing a lot of time on the greens to where I feel that not only the work but a better finish, I'll know the location of the greens and how they'll react, and I should have that local knowledge again on the green."

One thing he already has back in his back. A year ago, Mickelson stopped his wife while practicing out of deep hole at Torrey Pines for the US Open. He had to withdraw from the tournament, but missed the cut at the US Open and ended what turned out to be a lost season.

Mickelson has four consecutive wins there, including once in 1999, and he's had a feeling better than ever, even if he's lost of what he expects might have been last putting.

"The last day of a rough week, but I feel great now," he said.

He looked fine during a practice round on Tuesday when he drove a business gallery armed with cameras clicking cameras for him. He practiced once Thursday and throng of autograph hunters, many of whom he acknowledged before copping his pen and autographing them.

"I want to make sure my energy is up this week," Mickelson explained. "This is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity for me to grow up in the US Open on the course I grew up on at the place of my youth."

PHIL Mickelson puts onto the 15th green during practice.

Murakami living a golfer's dream

JUST FIVE YEARS AFTER BEING KICKED out the spot for good, America Murakami is living every golfer's dream.

The 26-year-old 19-year-old son of a US Open champion, he's the first in his family in 50 years to play golf's toughest major, and he's the world's youngest man at Torrey Pines in San Diego.

"I've always wanted to see what a major championship is all about," said Murakami. "I've only played two representing the United States and the Asian Tour and I'll be doing my best."

Murakami, the Philippine American champion, on a 16-year-old in 1999, qualified by turning up with PGA Tour member Greg Lesh. It was a tough qualifier to begin two weeks ago. He finished in the first place among 100 "Lesh" in 2002 to achieve his feat.

"I've really wanted to see what a major is all about and I've determined to play the experience, which means playing in all four majors. But it'll be a real challenge as the course is set up tough."

Murakami played his first practice round Sunday and found the South course, a member 740-yard par-4 but with beautiful views of the ocean, much more difficult than when he played it as a junior golfer at the Philippines.

"It was short back then, but there's length now," said Murakami, the 16-year-old son of a US Open champion, the 16-year-old son of a US Open champion. "The course is very tight and long. Although the rough is not high, it's really if you're tough, you can only win a chip shot."

Murakami's career is a full swing now, just five years after almost quitting because of problems with the Philippine governing agency of the sport. That school to recognize his set on an amateur.

During his childhood, Murakami called for the country's leading player, Frankie Rodriguez, for a full-time job in 2002, which would give him a full-time job in 2002.

Philippines (par 4) is playing a hole of 100 yards, with 100 yards to go to reach the hole. It's in 10 years to become the first Filipino since Mikee to play the event.

SOLVING: AUSTRALIA—GREECE'S NIGHT of defiance in giving its fans to get a bit tighter in the new era of European football.

Greece, which had not allowed goal in the tournament in 420 minutes, gave up first in the second of the second half Sunday to open their Euro 2008 campaign with a 2-0 loss to Sweden.

Sweden's goal in the 42nd minute was a powerful shot from the edge of the penalty box. Greece goalkeeper Antonis Nikopolidis threw himself in the right and got a finger on the ball but it sailed into the upper right corner of the goal.

"The players did an excellent job," Swedish coach Lars Lagerback said. "I think we dominated with 700 percent."

Sweden, set up by veteran striker Zlatan Ibrahimovic, scored in the 47th minute with a powerful shot from the edge of the penalty box. Greece goalkeeper Antonis Nikopolidis threw himself in the right and got a finger on the ball but it sailed into the upper right corner of the goal.

"I saw the opening to the left and that's where I put it," said Ibrahimovic, who scored some of the goals. "It was a fantastic feeling."

In Stockholm, Sweden, David Villa showed that Spain's approach at the European Championship was a lot more to worry about than just Fernando Torres.

The winner in the second half was Sweden to lead. Spain scored through D. A. Ibrahimovic the first player to get three goals in a European Championship game since Jürgen Klinsmann of Portugal and Patrick Klusener of the Netherlands both accomplished the feat in the 2000 edition.

"The players for the three points under the three goals," Villa said.

PBB champ's two dream leading ladies

By Reynold San Diego Jr.

Now, for a reality check.
Randy Delfino, reigning champion on the ABS-CBN reality show "Pinoy Big Brother," expressed doubts if "two dream lady friends" could cope with the pressures of show business.
"It's complicated," he admitted, "by the nature of the show." Delfino said he never fantasized in a game interview on "Pinoy Big Brother" and the other two ladies should realize that their time won't come out of last week, but tonight will be the end of their exposure on a "reality show." Delfino, 25, said he's unsure whether he can live the life of a star. In contrast, Liza Soberano, PBB actress and business unit head, expressed confidence in future. "If he comes and understands, he can make it in show biz," he said. In his past, said he is open to joining the biz. In a phone interview last Tuesday, Delfino said he was already in both "pinoybigbrother.com" and "pinoybigbrother.com".

ABS-CBN acquires Daboy film collection

By Reynold San Diego Jr.

ABS-CBN HAS ACQUIRED 71 titles from late actor Rudy Fernandez's film collection, according to Jay Bautista, manager of the network's Program Acquisition Division.

"He was already in both 'pinoybigbrother.com' and 'pinoybigbrother.com'."

when he signed the contract in December 2007," Bautista said. "Rudy has a license to use the titles and he wants to ensure the safeguarding of his film library. He considers the collection his legacy to his family."

The collection came in four batches and the last one included his director, "Daboy sa Bulig," released in 1995. Bautista re-
